

known," George Sand's "Souvenirs and Impressions" and Lamartine's "Twenty-five years of my Life." Mr. Stoddard, who edits these books, is hard at work preparing his copy for the printer.

Bret Harte, who continues to reside in Morristown, N. J., comes frequently to New York. Mr. Harte is also writing hard this summer. He has just finished a story called "Woe Lee, the Pag" which will appear in the September number of "Scribner's Monthly." Those who have been fortunate enough to see this story pronounce it one of the raciest and best of Mr. Harte's sketches. He gives the life of a Chinese boy from the hour of his singular birth in San Francisco, until he is finally—but we shall not tell the rest. Among the most attractive books for the summer season is Bryant's "Among the Trees" which will soon be issued by G. P. Putnam's Sons. The book is prettily illustrated by Jarvis McEntee, and altogether elaborately gotten up. The same house will soon bring out Woodworth's "Tour in Scotland," by Miss Woodworth. The Rev. E. P. Roe's novel "A Cheast Burr, or Lost and Saved" will be published in book form by Dodd & Mead when it has run its course as a serial in "Hearth and Home." The gallant Stanley is home again and in the best of spirits. He seems to have conquered at last all the English jealousy and prejudice and met with thorough and general recognition. His new book "Cœus and Magdala," will be published by the Harpers.

U. R. WELCOME!—ED.

Mr. Editor: Dear Sir, As you solicit communications from the numerous teachers you so generously furnish with your excellent paper, I send you this. In your issue of the 6th ult. you give an account of a certain will bequeathing seventeen cows to three heirs and accompanied by the remark that "there are very few who can detect what is wrong in the tale of these cows." I am not certain that there was anything wrong in the tail of the cows, but there was evidently a wrong in the will; one half, one third and one sixth make seventeen eighteenths, lacking one eighteenth of a unit, a deficiency which the borrowed cow just supplied. Had there been eighteen cows belonging to the estate, each of the heirs could have his share and there would have been one cow over, which the honest Executor (of course all Executors are honest) could have put in his own pocket. Or if the seventeen had been divided according to the conditions of the will, they could all have had their shares in cows and fractions of a cow, and there would have been seventeen eighteenths, or a whole cow minus but little more than the tail left.

WORKING AND WAITING.
There are two things that always pay—working and waiting. Either is useless without the other. Both united are invincibly and inevitably triumphant. He who waits without working is simply a man yielding to sloth and despair. He who works without waiting is ever fitful in his strivings, and misses results by impatience. He who works steadily and waits patiently may have a long journey before him, but at its close he will find his reward.—Exchange.

After Dinner.

"Why is it so many men are troubled with brain disease of late?" asked a gentleman. "In this telegraphic high pressure age," replied a friend, "there are a great many more things to occupy one's attention than twenty years ago, and the brains ain't any bigger now than they were then."

A Brooklyn schoolboy's composition: a horse has four legs; one at each corner.

For pure grit and long continued patience, you ought to go to Toledo. A young lady of that town has sent 116 pieces of poetry to a newspaper, and though all have been rejected, she is struggling with another.

The other day a merry-faced and bright-eyed Milesian was arraigned for disorderly conduct. The Judge inquired, very angrily, "Are you not ashamed to be here?" Indeed am I your Honor." "You are literally a disgraceful company," "I know it, your Honor," "It is shameful," "Too true," was the patient rejoinder. "If I permit you to go this time, will you ever be caught in such company again?" "Not unless your Honor sends for me," was the reply.

As a fashionable young lady, fresh from boarding-school, came to her favorite father's breakfast-table, instead of speaking English and saying, "Good morning," she spoke French and said: "Bon jour." "Of course the bones yours if you say so," responded the practical old gentleman, as he handed her the omelet portion of the beef-steak.

During a recent freshet in Connecticut, an editor telegraphed another at the scene of action: "Send me full particulars of the flood." The answer came: "You will find them in Genesis."

A beggar posted himself at the door of an English chancery court, and kept saying, "A penny, please, sir! Only a penny, sir, before you go in!" "And for what my man?" "Because, sir, the changes are you will not have one when you come out!"

SCHOOL NOTICE.

The legal notices of the Central Union School District (No. 7) are hereby notified that a meeting will be held in the Central School House, on MONDAY EVENING, JULY 13, 1874, at 8 o'clock.

The object of the meeting is to decide what sums of money shall be raised by tax, for the support of school, and for school houses out of the present.

The Trustees recommend that the district pay the sum of the Schoolhouse, Five Thousand Five Hundred Dollars, ($5,000) in addition to what is needed from the State, and for school-house purposes, Ten Thousand Dollars ($10,000).

By order of the Trustees,
G. PELLOUBET, Clerk.
